Gentlemen:

The pursuit of Microsoft is ludicrous when viewed by computer users across America. It is fueled by government avarice and not harm to customers and users. Show me where you have thousands of people screaming that they have been harmed. I used to think that antitrust actions were pursued because the noble American consumer was being abused by evil businessmen. Oh, I see, it isn't necessary to prove that they have been harmed or that they are too stupid to know they have been harmed. The "Government" knows better. Well, go find another lawyer employment case because this one is a clear cut case of judicial abuse. This is persecution not prosecution. Where were you all when real criminals were looting Enron???? As Thomas Paine would say, the only thing lacking here is common sense.

Sincerely,
